TRODDEN FLOWERS.

BY THOMAS.

There are some hearts that, like, a living vine, Cling to unkindly roots and ruined towers, Splits that suffer and do not repair—

Patient and sweet as lowly trodden flowers, That from beneath the piercer's heel arise, And give back odorous breath instead of sighs.

But there are other hearts that will not bend, The lonely love that haunts their eyes and ears; That would fain fall with anger worse than steel, And out of pity's spring draw idle tears.

O Nature! still it over be thy will, 100 things with good to mind, good with ill?

Why should the heavy foot of sorrow press? The willing heart of uncomplaining love—

Meek charity that shrinks not from distress, Gentleness, that turns to reprove?

Though virtue weep forever and lament, Will lowly heart turn to her and relent?

Why should the reel be broken that will bend, And they that dry the tears in others' eyes?

Feel their own anguish swelling without end, Their summer darkened with the shade of sighs?

Sure love to me sweet like thine own, Will fit at last, and leave us here alone;

Love weepeth always—weepeth for the past,

For woes that are—wishes that are late;

Wishes that are hard ambition wear at last,

And last, and last, and last;

For where're sorrows, sorrow is your lot,

This would be rebirth—Love rebirthed not.

In the Garden.

Every man that can afford it—and we may add, every woman too—should have a garden. The merchant who busies himself all day in the counting-room; the tailor who toils from morning till night on his bench; the editor who writes and clips and cuts and writes till the universe seems to him no more than a dry, rustling newspaper; the clergyman who pokes over his theology till the juice of nature dries out of it and out of his flesh; the sedentary female shortening their interminable sewing; all should have some such refreshing out-door interest for evening and morning recreation.

There is something in these subtle influences which we do not always appreciate, but which is none the less real and beneficial. The manual labor which re-invigorates the blood, brings back color and appetite, and restores the youthful joy of living, is not more certainly effective than the magnetism of the earth, the wholesome sun, the sight of greenness and growth, and the mild, silent, and subduing lessons of the stalks and blossoms and wings, that give breath to the sick, strength to the weak, rest to the weary, and happiness to the discontented. You bury your troubles under the rich soil you turn over with your spade. You dig up care with the weeds. You train up sweet sentiments and gentle thoughts with the fragrant pea-vines and rose-bushes. The opening of a morning glory symbolizes the expanding beauty of your soul. The round melons, swelling and swelling to ripeness, the homely potato-top, the tassels and silk of the corn—or the heliotrope, foxglove, pink, sweetwilliam—all have something friendly and soothing to say to you, when you come home disappointed and grieved, from your transactions in the world.

THE ADAMS SENTINEL AND GENERAL ADVERTISER.

Position of the Whig Party on the Mexican War—Extract from Lincoln's Speech in Congress, July 27th, 1849. "But as General Taylor is, par excellence, the hero of the Mexican war; and as you Democrats say, we Whigs have always opposed the war, you think it must be a very awkward and embarrassing for us to honor General Taylor. The declaration that we have always opposed the war is true or false, according to one who understands the term 'opposing the war.' If to say 'the war was unnecessary and unconstitutional' is to be opposed by the President, 'by opposing the war, then the Whigs have generally opposed it.' Whenever they have spoken at all, they have said thus; and they have said it on what has appeared good reason to them. The marching an army into the midst of a peaceful Mexican settlement, frightening the inhabitants away, leaving their growing crops and other property to destruction, to you may appear a perfectly amiable and peaceful, unprovoking, procedure; but it does not appear so to us. So to call such an act, to us appears no other than a naked, impudent absurdity, and we speak of it accordingly. But if, when the war had begun, and had become the cause of the country, the giving of our money and our blood, in common with ours, was support of the war, then it is not true that we have always opposed the war. With a few individual exceptions, you have constantly had our services here for all the necessary supplies. And more than this, you have had the services, and the lives of our political brethren in every trial and on every field. The hardy boy, and the mature man—the resolute and the distinguished, who have braved them; and in battle, they have endured and fought and fell with you. Clay and Webster each gave a son, never to be returned. From the State of my own residence, besides other worthy but less known Whig names, we sent Marshall, Morriston, Barker and Ward; they all fought, and one fell, and in the fall of that we lost our best Whig man. Nor were the Whigs few in number, or lagged in the day of danger. In that fearful, bloody, breathless struggle at Buena Vista where each man's last task was to beat back five foes or die himself, of the five high officers who perished, four were Whigs.

In speaking of this, I mean no odious comparison between the foul-hearted Whigs and Democrats who fought there. On the other occasions, and among the lower officers and privates on that occasion, I doubt not the proportion was different. I wish to do justice to all. I think of all those brave men as Americans, in whose proud minds, as an American, I too have a share. Many of them, Whigs and Democrats, are my constituents and personal friends; and I thank them—one and all, for the imperishable honor they have conferred on our common State.

"But the distinction between the cause of the President in beginning the war, and the cause of the country after it was begun, is a distinction which you cannot perceive. To you, the President and the country seem to be all one. You are interested to see no distinction between them, and I venture to suggest that possibly your interest blinds you little. We see the distinction, as we think clearly enough, and our friends who have fought in the war have no difficulty in seeing it also. What those who have fallen would say were they alive and here, of course we can never know; but with those who have returned there is no difficulty. Col. Haskell and Major Grimes, members here, both fought in the war; and one of them underwent extraordinary perils and hardships; still they, like all other Whigs here, voted on the record that the war was unnecessary and unconstitutionally commenced by the President. And even General Taylor himself, the noblest Roman of them all, has declared that as a citizen, and particularly as a soldier, it is sufficient for him to know that his country is at war with a foreign nation, to do all in his power to bring it to a speedy and honorable termination, by the most vigorous and energetic operations, without inquiring about its justice, or anything else connected with it.

Letters of Acceptance of Messrs. Lincoln and Hamlin.

Both Mr. Lincoln, the republican nominee for President, and Mr. Hamlin, the nominee for Vice-President, have written letters of acceptance. The letter of Mr. Lincoln is addressed to the president of the Chicago convention, and is as follows:

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 23, 1860.

"Sir: I accept the nomination tendered me by the convention over which you presided, and of which I am formally apprised by the letter of yourself and others, acting as a committee of the convention for that purpose.

The declaration of principles and sentiments which accompanies your letter meets my approval, and it shall be my care not to belittle or disregard it in any part. I implore the assistance of Divine Providence, and with due regard to the views and feelings of all who were represented in the convention, to the rights of all the States, and territories, and people, of the nation; to the inalienability of the constitution, and the perpetual union, harmony and prosperity of all. I am most happy to co-operate for the practical success of the principles declared by the convention. Your obliged friend and fellow-citizen,

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Mr. Hamlin, in his letter, speaking of the Chicago platform, says:

"Those resolutions enunciate clearly and forcibly the principles which unite us, and the objects proposed to be accomplished. They address themselves to all, and there is neither necessity nor propriety in my entering upon a discussion of any of them. They have the approval of my judgment, and in any action of mine, will be faithfully and cordially sustained."

What Our Opponents Say.

The Louisville Journal (supporting the Bell and Everett ticket), gives the following gratuitous testimony in behalf of Lincoln:

"The Republican organs, by common consent, designate their candidate for the Presidency as 'Honest Old Abe.' We are by no means disposed to deny his right to this designation. We know him personally, and have observed his public course; and however strongly we may condemn some of the doctrines to which he is committed, we have at no time seen reason to doubt his honesty. We believe that he has the good of his country at heart. Thus much we take pleasure in saying in his behalf."

for Adams County, who is authorized to make sales and take orders.

Fair-Mount Nurseries having been established for more than 20 years, the proprietors have themselves that their trees are of the best selected kinds. Having fruited many of them, they know what they are.

The greatly increased and increasing spirit of planting, as well as the degree of patronage extended to us, warrant us in greatly extending the Nurseries, so that we are prepared to offer for the autumn of 1860 and successing years a much more extensive stock than ever offered—cultivating from Thirty-five to Forty Acres, and containing several hundred thousand Trees at various stages of growth, all of which are grown on soil, and under treatment, best calculated to make a healthy and natural growth.

Geo. Peters & Co.

The undersigned, having accepted the above Agency for the sale of fruit trees in this County, takes this method of informing the public, that those wishing to purchase Trees will please take the subject into consideration before I call personally upon them, as I expect to canvass a portion of the County.

All letters upon the subject addressed to me at Bendersville, or left at any of the hotels in Gettysburg, will be attended to. Catalogues can be had at all the Printing Offices. Persons wishing to select from our catalogues can there see them. I will be in Gettysburg during Court weeks, so that persons wishing to purchase fruit trees can see me. The cultivation of good fruit of all kinds has been entirely too much neglected in this County, as the demand for good fruit is very much on the increase.
